Daylight Saving Time

We should Give It a Trial.

The men who heard Lieut.-Col. D. C. Cabell, commander of the Southwestern Proving Ground, speak at the Rotary club Friday were impressed with the reasons he gave for the Proving Ground operating on Daylight Saving Time, and why it was desirable to have civilian Hope operate on the same time schedule. Since then the newspaper, publishing the colonel's speech almost in full, has made the facts available to all the local public.

1,600 Now at Work on the Proving Ground

Time Gate at Main Entrance to Be Ready Monday, August 11

Signs of continued growth and ever increasing activity at the Southwestern Proving Ground are becoming daily more evident. Total number of employees on the project, including civilian employees of the War Department, reached over 1,600 on August 6.

Actual man hours for the W. E. Callahan Construction company for the day of August 6 amounted to 9,988 hours. Reflecting this figure, the Time Gate at the main gate entrance of the Proving Ground will be completed and ready for use Monday, August 11.

Siding is nearing completion upon the administration office buildings for the Constructing Quartermaster, the Contractor and the Architect Engineers. Rafters and roofs are beginning to take shape on these buildings at the present time. Also the walls and roof are now practically complete on the Infantry Building and it is expected to be ready for use the first of next week.

Using a suitable building which was already on the site, the Project Safety Officer has now converted it into a completely new office building. The building is used as an office, while the rear is used as a storehouse for fire fighting equipment. A ton and a half stake bed truck is being used as a temporary fire truck, and is equipped with fire extinguishers, shovels, ladders and fire rakes. Complete fire protection is afforded the full 24 hours. This present equipment is expected to perform very efficiently the duty of protecting the project from all fire hazards pending the delivery of a regular fire truck, complete with the latest modern equipment.

In the Real Estate Branch, the appraisers lack only about two days work of having all of the original Proving Ground area completely appraised. Also, orders have just been issued out of Washington, D. C. to proceed with appraisals of the site for the airport, which comprises some 2,734 acres of Hempstead county's richest black land. Appraisers are expected to begin work in this area immediately. Over 70 abstracts of title have been prepared and sent to the Washington, D. C., office of the Real Estate Branch, War Department, along with a number of condemnation assemblies. Twelve completed abstracts have been sent to the Office of the United States District Attorney at Texarkana, Arkansas for examination and action, and forty options have been executed and delivered. Mr. Frank Fitzpatrick of the Real Estate Branch, War Department, Washington, D. C., suggested the Real Estate Branch for the Southwestern Proving Ground, Thursday, August 7 and complimented the staff highly upon their fair and efficient handling of land acquisitions for the project.

Touring America

Vacation time is still with us, and the 48 states and Canada are featuring attractions well worth enjoying. If you're going touring, or have just got back, you should know about these places.

1. What states would you go to to visit these national parks: Wind Cave, Mammoth Cave, Carlsbad Caverns, Crater Lake?
2. Why are Springfield, Ill., and Springfield, Mass., well known?
3. Who is the Spanish explorer of 400 years ago discovered the interior of the U. S., and whose quarto centennial is now being observed by several midwestern states?
4. Where are these famous resorts: Rye Beach, Atlantic City, Newport, Catalina Island?
5. In the U. S., do odd numbered federal highways run east-west, or north-south?

Service Bill Meets Trouble in the House

Administration Leaders Willing to Settle for 18 Months Extension

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Some Democratic house leaders virtually abandoned hope Saturday of passing legislation providing indefinite extension of army service and sought to salvage from mounting opposition legislation approved by the senate.

Sources said there existed a pool of a working combination of Republicans and Democrats which could easily defeat the impending house legislation to remove the present one year limit of service for selectees, national guardsmen and reservists.

Chairman May (D-Ky.) insisted, however, that the House Military Committee, would stand by its limited service version of controversial legislation — and Republican opponents said they would not compromise.

With the vote set for Monday or Tuesday President Roosevelt's lieutenants took advantage of a week-end recess to buttonhole undecided members and urge the 18 months extension as approved by the senate and to select a man to offer that compromise.

It didn't seem so bad the first four days. Any ship and sailor worth his salt can ride through those North Atlantic storms with no trouble at all. But then on the fifth day they began to see signs of the convoy which had been missed. Lifelines, bits of deck, oars and spars dotted the water.

There were two lifeboats, one traveling in the wake of the other, and the men were pulling the oars just hard enough to keep headed into the swells and in line with the shipping lanes.

Sixteen men in the first boat represented the crew of the Morris Prince and 21 in the second lifeboat were the survivors of the Morning Star. All of them were suffering from exposure but it was the men of the oil tanker Morris Prince who were in a bad way, because the wind, the rain and salt spray don't burn any good.

The attack had been sudden. The ship was steaming along in very loose formation, ready to spread at the first sign of a periscope, when heavy shells began dropping. They see the German surface raider because it was still on the horizon when the shelling began. Suddenly it had fired around the ship, the engines were still and the ship was a target.

Then they had the range. Still on the horizon, the German started picking off the British merchantmen one by one, though every boat by that time was speeding away from the zone.

Picking Off Convoy—One By One The marksmanship was excellent, said one sailor, and when a shell whistled down upon the Morris Prince it struck a fire in the after part of the ship. The engines were still and the ship was a target.

Flames spread around the ship, and when the German started picking off the British merchantmen one by one, though every boat by that time was speeding away from the zone.

But the rest of the crew managed to escape from that blazing inferno when two lifeboats were lowered. They lost track of the second boat during the night, said the seaman.

The men of the Morning Star who clung aboard the S. S. Croxford from their bobbing lifeboat said their ship had sunk in eight minutes.

Woe Betide German Sub That Abuses the Ship of Capt. McDillon: He Rammed U-Boat and Sank Her

But Latecomer Was Fortunate to Have Missed Convoy

By PAUL MANNING
NEA Service Staff Correspondent
A SEAPORT TOWN, England—Methodically the shipbuilders worked—hammering and pulling at the twisted steel plates which framed a great gaping hole just above the waterline of the S. S. Croxford.

Anchored to a dock because all the shipways and drydocks were full, this ship was being readied for another trip back across the North Atlantic. It had arrived in this port just the day before, battered and bruised, but still afloat after ramming a U-boat in mid-ocean. So the shipbuilders were repairing the damage to the hull and the dockers were unloading the cargo.

"A lousy trip it was," said the first mate, "High seas and storms, U-boats and raiders and if you think that don't make a tough trip then the back of me hand to you."

The S. S. Croxford had slipped out of New York bay on schedule, loaded right to the gunwales with a cargo for the British war effort. But en route to Newfoundland engine trouble had slowed the ship down, so they pulled into their Canadian port-of-call behind time.

Then when they began the dangerous zig-zag trip homeward it had been foggy and then it had been stormy. So they never did catch the convoy.

Strikes Halt Defense Work

Picket Lines Thrown Around New Jersey Plant

By the Associated Press
Strikes at two New Jersey industrial plants virtually tied up production on approximately $500,000,000 worth of defense orders.

Picket lines were thrown around the Curtis-Wright Corp. at Caldwell and company officials said work stoppage would be complete by Sunday. The plant has approximately $100,000,000 in defense contracts.

AFL officials said more than 8,000 workers joined the walkout. Work was at a standstill on another $453,000,000 defense order for the construction of naval vessels at the huge docks of the Federal Builders & Drydock Co., at Kearny, and remained in the grip of the CIO strikers.

The government's mediation board announced that an agreement had been reached for settlement of the dispute between CIO packing workers' organization committee and Armour & Co. of Chicago.

35th to Move Next Tuesday

Division to Spend Remainder of August in Southwest

CAMP ROBINSON, Ark. (AP)—The 35th Division of more than 20,000 soldiers will move out on Friday to the next Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday for the South Arkansas war games.

The schedule, as announced by Major General R. E. Truman, division commander, calls for departure of special troops, division headquarters, the 10th Quartermaster Regiment and the 43rd Engineers at 4:30 a. m., Tuesday. They will bivouac near Prescott, Ark. The 70th Brigade combat team, headquarters and service company of the 10th Medical Regiment and the 10th Medical's Third Battalion will follow at 7 a. m.

The 69th Brigade combat team, most of what remains here of the 153rd Infantry Regiment, and selected detachments of the 43rd "rolling post exchange" will leave Thursday.

Headquartered here since last January, the division will spend the remainder of August in South Arkansas and will consolidate with other Second Army units about the end of the month for mass movement into Louisiana for the final stages of the war games.

Guernsey Bond Sale Establishes Record

The recent sale of Guernsey School District bonds here—the issue was bought by the Citizens National bank—set a record for the state of Arkansas. Satterfield Brothers & Co., Little Rock investment house, report that this is the first district of its size and type to borrow money at less than 4 1/2 per cent. The sale price of the bonds, 101 1/2 for 3 1/4's, was on approximately a 3 1/2 per cent basis.

Public Invited to Hear Dyer

Chamber Also Invites Public to Attend Barbeque

The Board of Directors of the Chamber of Commerce has decided that in addition to inviting the general public to hear the address by Dr. Gus W. Dyer at the Experiment Farm Monday night, August 11, that the public be invited to attend the barbeque chicken dinner to be held at 7:00 p. m., just preceding the Annual Meeting of the Chamber of Commerce at which Dr. Dyer is the principal speaker.

Both ladies and men are invited, and tickets for the banquet may be secured from the Chamber of Commerce office, or from any of the following directors: Roy Anderson, Chad Hall, Syd McMath, C. C. Spragins, Geo. Robison, Henry Haines, A. W. Stubboman, Terrell Cornelius, Guy E. Basse. The price is 50c per plate.

Since it has been announced that Dr. Dyer is to be the main speaker at this meeting, quite a number who have heard him in the past have stated that he will certainly not disappoint them.

Mr. G. C. Murray, Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce of Prescott, who with President Tom J. Compton of their chamber have accepted our invitation to be with us for this meeting writes:

"Permit me to say that you were exceedingly fortunate in obtaining such a noted speaker as Dr. Gus Dyer of the Vanderbilt University. It has been my pleasure to hear him several times and he is always most interesting, instructive and entertaining in what he has to say."

While everyone is quite busy you are urged to attend this dinner and the Annual Meeting of the Chamber of Commerce. If you cannot come for the dinner at 7:00 p. m. come out for the meeting and Dr. Dyer's address which starts at 8:00 p. m.

In case of rain that would hinder an outdoor meeting of this kind the dinner will be held in the city hall at 8 p. m.

McCraken Is Blevins Supt.

Augusta (Ark.) Man Succeeds A. B. Wetherington

Russell W. McCracken, with the Augusta (Ark.) public schools for five years and superintendent for the last three, has been elected superintendent of Blevins public schools, the Blevins school board announced Saturday.

Mr. McCracken succeeds A. B. Wetherington, who resigned at the end of the last school year to become superintendent at Malvern. It was originally announced that Mr. Wetherington's successor would be F. W. Whitesides of Pulaski county, but Mr. Whitesides resigned before actually entering on his duties.

Mr. McCracken holds the degrees of B.S.E. and M.S. from the University of Arkansas, and has spent this summer in graduate work at George Peabody College for Teachers, Nashville, Tenn.

Mrs. McCracken has been elected a teacher in the Blevins elementary schools. The McCrackens are moving to Blevins with their two daughters, Misses Martha Jean and Ann.

The Blevins board also announced that Miss Clyde Martin, member of the faculty for seven years, has resigned to do graduate work at the University of Arkansas.

2 Navy Ensigns Go to Prison

Convicted of Killing Woman in 'Hedge Hopping'

PENSACOLA, Fla.—(AP)—Two ensigns court martialed at the naval station here May 20 after their low-flying plane had decapitated a woman working in an Alabama turnip field were dismissed from the service and sent to prison Friday after conviction on involuntary manslaughter charges. The ensigns were Joseph C. Thompson of Haldsburg, Calif., and Paul C. Brown of Chicago.

Brown, pilot of the plane which decapitated Mrs. Robert Phillips of Robertsdale, Ala., March 25, was sentenced to 24 months at hard labor and Thompson, his passenger, to 12 months. They were dismissed shortly after noon and under Marine guard started for the naval prison at Portsmouth, N. H.

The court martial ended May 20 and the findings were sent to Secretary of the Navy Knox who Friday returned to Capt. A. C. Read, commander of the station here, orders sustaining the court martial's findings. President Roosevelt approved them July 29.

The ensigns were convicted, also, on a charge of conduct to the prejudice of good order and discipline and of carelessly endangering the lives of others.

Explained "Boxing the compass" means to enumerate the various points, half points and quarter points of the mariner's compass in their proper sequence.

Thousands Are Reported Killed on Both Sides

Reports Indicate Advance of Nazi Drives on Odessa, Leningrad

By the Associated Press
Bloody mass slaughter of both German and Russian armies was reported Saturday at the end of seven weeks of war with Hitler's high command asserting that more than 200,000 Soviet troops had been killed or wounded and 141,000 captured in recent drives while Russia indicated losses of some 50,000 men inflicted on ten more Russian divisions.

Six German tank divisions, four infantry (132,000 men) were said by the Russians to have suffered losses averaging about 30 per cent in a recent action.

Two Main Drives
The German high command said the Nazi invasion forces had dealt two new smashes at Russian defenses in the Ukraine and in the vicinity of Rostov, 60 miles southeast of Smolensk, on the central front guarding Moscow.

Hitler's field headquarters in a special communique said that newly trapped Russian forces had been wiped out in the Smolensk sector with more than 30,000 prisoners taken.

Earlier the high command reported that German troops, slashing into the southern front, destroyed 25 Soviet divisions, capturing 103,000 men and leaving more than 200,000 Russians killed or wounded on the battlefield. The Germans also reported the capture of Korosten, raid junction town 80 miles northwest of Kiev, after Nazi troops fought in thick forests and swamps in the Pinsk marshes.

Claims Much Booty
Besides the bloody losses suffered by the Russians in the battle of Uman, south of Kiev, Hitler's field headquarters asserted that the huge store of booty taken included 317 tanks, 858 guns, 242 anti-tank and anti-aircraft guns, 5,250 trucks and 12 trains.

Authorized sources in London conceded that Germany seemed to be making headway in the drive toward Odessa, key Black sea port, but they deprecated the quotation of high sounding claims. The Germans are making of other gains.

These sources said Berlin claims should be regarded with caution because previous reports of advances had sometimes been conveniently forgotten by the Nazis later.

Front line dispatches, noting stiff Russian resistance at Uman, reported that entire villages were raging in the fighting. There was no hint of a major defeat contained in the Moscow communique. The daily communique said fighting raged through the night with key sectors remaining unchanged.

Again the Red armies were reported to be holding doggedly north of Leningrad on the Estonian front, below Leningrad near Smolensk on the central, and in the Bel-Tsarkov sector 50 miles south of Kiev.

The Russians said their air force, which the Nazis pictured as virtually destroyed, struck heavy blows at German troops.

Gas Ration 5 Gallons Week

This Is Probability for the Eastern States

NEW YORK—(AP)—A probability that not more than five gallons of gasoline a week will be available to the average passenger car driver in the East this winter was foreseen Friday by statistical experts in the oil industry. Commenting on a suggestion that Eastern motorists should be limited to 15 gallons of gasoline each a week to prevent the gasoline shortage threatening the Atlantic seaboard, one

LESSONS IN LOVE

BY JERRY BRONDFIELD

COPYRIGHT, 1941, NEA SERVICE, INC.

YESTERDAY: After Larry Blake left, she realized she doesn't love him and rejects his offer of marriage. She refuses to admit that she is romantically interested in Dugan, but alone at home she concludes to herself that falling in love with Blake is not a remote possibility. She determines to see little of him during the next few days. Larry, however, tries to persuade Dugan to return in New York. They talk about it after they have won the first game in the round robin series. Dugan says he had better go back to Oklahoma.

She settled back on the rear of Sue's convertible and awaited the championship game between Briar Hill and Ocean Side. Well, it had been an interesting interlude. She stole a sidelong glance at Uncle Hank.

Next time Uncle Hank had any ideas about springing a fast one on her, he'd think twice.

LARRY was just mounting his horse when Dugan came over. "Larry, not that you need any added inspiration now, but I want to wish you the best of luck with Barbara." He extended his hand.

Larry grooved leaned down over his horse's neck. "What?"

"Of course. I—I happened to see you in the garden the night of the dance, and—well, can't I wish you the best of everything?" She's a great girl, Larry, he added slowly. "I started out to spin her like a top, and she wound up having me in a whirl. You don't mind, do you?"

Larry grinned down at him. "Well, I'll be—Look, save it, son. I've something to tell you later."

"To Dugan that word 'later' typified the end of everything that was to come. This polo game was just to be a final piece of necessary business before he could leave New York forever, and he played as though he wanted to put the game on ice in the first chukker."

He was a wild man, taking chances that no one else would dare take.

Larry shouted for him to ease off, but the advice fell on unheeding ears. Dugan got two goals in the first chukker, two more in the second and was roaring on his way to a third when it happened.

Somehow his pony stumbled, and at the same time the Ocean Side No. 4 man crashed into him. There was a split-second of pain in Dugan's knee, and then oblivion as his horse rolled over him.

The roar of the crowd was punctuated by the referee's whistle.

"He'll never come out of that one," someone muttered and Barbara felt as though she had heard her own death sentence pronounced.

She was scrambling out of the car even as Uncle Hank hurried up. "To the hospital, quick," Uncle Hank panted as they ran toward his waiting car.

FOR three hours Barbara sat in a chair outside the operating room. The whiteness around her knuckles betrayed her.

Then the doctor appeared. His face was grave, but there was a spark of a smile around his eyes. "He'll live," he said simply.

Barbara faintly, Uncle Hank caught her, a look of disgust on his face. "Now who's going to catch me when I faint?" he murmured.

They waited another hour after Barbara was revived.

"We just want to make sure there isn't something we can't do," Uncle Hank insisted.

"Frankly, there is," the doctor told them. "The patient lost quite a bit of blood during the operation. We need a transfusion. Would you care to be typed?"

"Take me," Uncle Hank said. "She'll faint again."

Barbara turned a furious look on her uncle and took the doctor aside for a few whispered words. The doctor smiled.

He took them both into the laboratory and told them to roll up their sleeves.

Dugan Blake blinked through the light that streamed through the window. He tried to frown and it hurt.

He made out the face of Hank Chase on his right and then turned his head slowly to look at Barbara.

She took his hand. "Darling," she whispered. "You're going to be all right."

An incredulous look came into Dugan's eyes. "Did you say darling?" he whispered.

Uncle Hank stood up. "Don't wear yourself out, my boy, by trying to figure this thing right now. When you get some strength, she'll probably tell you you're going to marry her."

Barbara's eyes glistened. "And if you refuse I'll take back my blood."

"I was going to give you mine, Dugan," Hank said, "but she told the doctor first. Said it was the right of a future wife, the little cheat."

Dugan pressed her hand against his lips. "Wait'll the tribe hears about the blue blood in these red-skin veins. They'll disown me."

"Let 'em," Barbara whispered. "I'll sign for all rights to you."

Recreation for Soldiers

Presbyterian Women Plan to Open Recreation Center

As a service to the soldiers who will be in Hempstead county during the maneuver period, the members of the First Presbyterian Church of Hope will open a "Soldier's Recreation Center" on next Monday, August 11.

The center will be located in the Church and Sunday School buildings on East Second and Hazel streets and will be open to soldiers and other visitors from 2:30 p. m. to 10:30 p. m. each day. One or more persons will be in charge at all times to welcome visiting soldiers and others who may care to avail themselves of the facilities offered.

Ice water, books, magazines, daily newspapers, writing paper and envelopes will be furnished. Space and materials will be available for letter writing, quiet games, music and other services that the soldiers may need and enjoy.

Mrs. Harry J. Lemley is in charge of arrangements for the center and almost every member of the Presbyterian Church is contributing time or materials to the project.

The Result of World at War

Most of Lilies in U. S. Brought From Japan

By JACH STINNETT
WASHINGTON — The American man-in-the-street hasn't begun to grasp all the dislocations that are developing as the result of a world at war.

I'm going to tell you about a comparatively minor one which nevertheless will affect every community in the United States. It is that on Easter almost every church in the country will be barren of lilies and in the time between now and then weddings, funerals and religious ceremonies which ordinarily employ this symbol of purity as their chief decoration will have to look to some other flower.

The United States yearly imports 27,000,000 lily bulbs—almost entirely from Japan, though some previously come from Holland. This is 97 per cent of the country's annual consumption. The other 3 per cent is raised here, mostly in the Pacific northwest. This year, that 3 per cent will have to do, though it may be augmented somewhat by bulbs which florists already have on hand.

Even before the present freezing of Japanese credits which shuts off the supply completely, the lily bulb business had wilted. A New York florist recently appeared at the Department of Agriculture, wringing his hands. He had ordered 700 cases of Japanese lily bulbs. He had been notified that he could have 50. No reason was given. Whether the lily bulb crop in Japan is a failure this year or whether the Nipponese are too busy with their war efforts wasn't explained. Now, of course, this florist, who ordinarily handles 700 cases, will face a lot of his Easter customers without a bloom.

Solution Sought
Confronted with this situation, the Department of Agriculture has rolled up its sleeves and gone to work—and as a result, it's possible that in a few years the farmers of the South may have a new industry.

In its efforts to discover new crops for the country, the department's Bureau of Plant Industry, at its experimental farm at Beltsville, Md., has been trying for years to develop an Easter lily bulb that would grow outside the small area in the Pacific northwest. An Easter lily bulb, in its growth season divides into "scales" (about 50 to the bulb) and it is from these that the lily plant comes. So far, in this country, the bulbs have been subject to a malicious disease which either destroys the bulb altogether or prevents its division into scales. Whether the bureau has got a disease-resistant bulb that can be grown in great quantities is not positive, but with our whole supply shut off they are going to darn well find out. Here's how:

From the old Farm Resettlement Administration, the Farm Security Administration inherited several big farms. One was Sepperson Farms, in North Carolina, near Cape Hatteras and not far from Diamond Smags. The other was Terrebonne Farms in the Cajon country of the Mississippi Delta.

On these two farms, the FSA intends this summer to put out 10,000 hand-picked bulbs. It is a purely experimental effort, but if it is successful, it will result in a half-million scales and next spring, 500,000 more lilies—more than half the total of the United States' present crop. It would also give the country a big jump on a new plant industry—one that could be developed in the South where the farmers have suffered most and where Martin aircraft factory where bombers are being made for the United States and Britain, have turned movie actors for the sake of the national defense program. They were used as models in a film produced by the Office of Emergency Management to stress the importance of plant protection in defense industries.

One Real Fly
There are two flies in the continent of American production of Japanese lilies. One is just exactly that—an aphid—a member of that vast family of tiny winged bugs that prey on many fruits and plants and clutter up the street lights and even swarm into the houses on summer nights. It is this aphid that carries the virus which destroys the bulbs. The hordes of aphids which what they are, the only thing that can be done is to develop a disease resistant plant.

The other difficulty is to produce plants that can stand "forcing" (artificial heat treatment to bring them to bloom at the desired time) without "blasting" (destruction and even tearing of the petals as the buds burst).

In any event, you can bet that the Department of Agriculture for the next year is going to have a sharp eye on Terrebonne and Sepperson.

Naval Strength in the Pacific

Japan Is Biggest Question Mark in the Pacific

AP Feature Service
Biggest nautical question mark in the Pacific crisis is the Japanese navy. Only the Japanese know, and they aren't telling, exactly how big is the fleet that flies the Rising Sun flag.
Several years ago Japan clamped the lid on naval information. Despite that vigilance, naval experts all over the world have a pretty good idea about the present strength of the Japanese fleet.
Several factors make close estimates possible. First, naval constructors know how long it takes to build a fighting vessel. Second, Japan must import much vital ship-building material, and export totals show how much. Third, a battleship is too big to be built in a laboratory, and the news gets around.
Japan had ten capital ships when she went hush-hush on naval information. British sources estimate she's building nine more, five over 40,000 tons and four super pocket battleships of about 15,000 tons.
Published British naval data says three of the big Japanese battleships have been launched—the Kadakuru, Kasino and Haghiyo. They also say two of the pocketships have been launched. Fitting out of the three big ones should be completed in early 1942, the smaller ones by late '41.
The U. S. publishers no such exhaustive naval estimates as the British, but consensus of U. S. naval experts is that the Japanese are building "at least eight" new battleships.
Secretary of Navy Knox testified at the lend-lease bill hearing that Japan's over-all naval combat strength as of Jan. 1, 1941, was 985,000 tons, not far behind the 1,250,000 tons of combat ships in the U. S. fleet.

JIM MARVIN GETS A DEFENSE JOB

by THE STATE EMPLOYMENT SERVICE

1. I HEAR THEY NEED SKILLED MEN FOR DEFENSE WORK. I WANT TO REGISTER.

O.K., MR. MARVIN.

2. WHAT KIND OF WORK CAN YOU DO?

I'M WORKING IN A STORE NOW BUT I'M A MACHINIST BY TRADE.

3. PHONE THE GORDON MACHINE SHOP THAT WE'RE SENDING OVER A MACHINIST WE THINK WILL SUIT THEM.

4. HOW'S IT GOIN' MARVIN?

FINE! IT FEELS LIKE OLD TIMES.

1. Jim Marvin knows that a lot of skilled workers will be needed in building tanks, trucks, ships, guns, and other material needed for national defense. So he goes to his local State employment office, where, at no cost, he can register for a job.

2. For 2 years Marvin has been clerking in a grocery store. But he wants to get back at his trade as a machinist, where his training and experience will be useful in the defense program. The employment office makes a record of the places he has worked and the kinds of work he has done, and checks his knowledge of his trade.

3. A week later the employment office has a call from a local machine shop for a machinist. The card on Jim Marvin shows that he has the required experience. He is told about the opening, and the machine shop is notified that he will apply for the job.

4. Jim Marvin got the job. His place in the grocery store has been filled by the employment office. Jim is glad to be working at his trade again and to have a direct part in the Nation's preparation for defense.

Farm Bureau Officials From 9 States on Training Program at Hot Springs

Eight presidents and one executive secretary of state federations will appear on the Southern Training School program of the American Farm Bureau Federation at Hot Springs, Arkansas, August 21, 22, 23.
They include: Ray B. Wiser, California; Walter L. Randolph, Alabama; Joe Frank Porter, Tennessee; J. Walter Hammond, Texas; Ransom E. Aldrich, Mississippi; R. E. Short, Arkansas; Hassil Schenck, Indiana; and C. Chester du Mond, New York, presidents of the organizations in their respective states, and Ben Kilgore, executive secretary of the Kentucky Farm Bureau Federation.

Cleveland too Stunned to Hop on Manager; Toothless Cubs Need More Than Paint Job; Dodger Must Pass Two on Base to Qualify

By HARRY GRAYSON
AP Service Sports Editor

There is not yet a demand for a new manager in Cleveland.
It must be that the boys are still too stunned.
But, after all, the Indians are a well-balanced club. They have a one-man pitching staff in Feller and a one-man attack in Heath.
It remained for the Brooklyn to demonstrate that the Cubs require more than a paint job.
When three sections of the center field bleachers at Wrigley Field were cleared of spectators and the seats daubed deep maroon to give batters a more favorable hitting background, the Bruins threatened to become some thing of a power at home.
Things went along fine until the Flatbushers took a liking to the decorations, too—to the extent of 44 hits and 24 runs in a three-game swindle.
There were times when Jimmy Wilson's pitchers wished they were still pitching out of white shirts.
Casey Stengel, greatest authority on the subject, insists Pete Reiser did not become a bonafide Dodger by passing Billy Herman on the bases in Chicago.
"Why, once in Cincinnati," explains the inimitable Casey, a Dodger at heart, "Lonnie Frey and another Dodger passed each other going in opposite directions."
While Doc Frotho scouted, either for another job or some one to make the Phillies less futile, old Hans Loebert took the club on its most successful road trip in years.
It will serve Hans Loebert right.

Comedian of Long Standing Furnishes Laughs

The fellow had been in an insane asylum for 15 years and finally had been adjudged sane. On the day of his scheduled departure, he arose early and went to the bathroom to shave. While thus engaged, a motorist drove up outside and began to honk the horn. Our hero looked out the window and recognized his brother, come to take him home.
"Just a minute," he yelled, "I'm shaving and will be right out." He turned back to his mirror but after a couple of minutes the horn again set up its incessant honking. Irritated, the fellow again went to the window and shouted, "All right, all right, just a minute."
As he turned from the window this time a sudden jerk by his elbow knocked the mirror from its place. Unable to complete his shaving, our hero looked long and despairingly at the blank mirrorless wall, then complained:
"Wouldn't you know it? Fifteen years in this place and on the day I'm supposed to get out, I have to cut my head off!"

Little Things Give Congress That Zip

WASHINGTON — There is so much big news from Washington these days, though it meets only two or three times a week, still has time for a lot of the little news doesn't get printed. This is as it should be in an age of priorities—first things first.
But if you believe the old ungrammatical saw that "it's the little insignificant things that count," you should know that congress, even stance, the House of Representatives passed a law the other day which makes it a federal offense to steal chickens, if you take 'em across state lines.

The good statesmen didn't intend to pass the law that way in the first place, but it happened that there was a bill (S. 1261) providing for the punishment of persons transporting stolen cattle in interstate commerce, and for other purposes. It was the "for other purposes" that left the door open for the chickens to walk in.
The bill was very specific about defining cattle as "one or more bulls, steers, oxen, cows, heifers or calves, or the carcasses of one or more bulls, steers, oxen, cows, heifers or calves." No chance of making a mistake on that, and the penalty called for not more than $5000 or five years.
The committee which had this measure in charge, however, decided that the coverage wasn't broad enough, so they put through an amendment which defined cattle as "one or more bulls, steers, oxen, cows, heifers, calves, sheep, hogs or horses."
Jesse Sees Through It
The amendment got by the committee that way although you'd think that even congressmen would know that sheep, hogs and horses were hardly cattle. There was one congressman smart enough to catch that, and it was none other than Jesse P. Wolcott of Port Huron, Mich. So Congressmen Wolcott got up and made 'em change the law. Had 'em strike out the word "cattle" because he had looked it up in the dictionary and found cattle were bovine animals, and bovine animals were horned animals such as sheep, goats and buffalo. Furthermore, said Jesse, hogs didn't have horns, though he didn't specify whether he looked this up in the dictionary or was just relying on memory.
Anyway, Jesse's real purpose was to include chickens because the chicken-stealing business was as bad as the bovine stealing business, so he proposed changing the bill to read "animals or fowl" and to include "ducks, geese, turkeys and so forth."
Francis Case of Custer, S. D., made a few remarks in support of this idea. And while Francis E. Walter of Easton, Pa., said he thought the word "cattle" covered all animals, and while Earl C. Michener of Adrian, Mich., warned that the measure would put J. Edgar Hoover's G-men in the interstate chicken-thief-catching business and make the FBI double its force—the bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read a third time, and passed.
P. S. Similar legislation has been vetoed by the President twice before.
Vermont May Get Hers
Then there is the matter of paying War of 1812. It looks as though that's going to be cleared up at last, and have to shell out to the Green Mountain State for its expenses in the battle of 1812. The bill is $92,888.90.
It seems that the young republic could borrow money from the states back in those days, and did. Vermont went into the sack for about $11,000 to help finance the war. The government wasn't able to pay off immediately, so the claim stood on the books for quite a spell. Then the Vermont state house burned in 1857, and the record of the loan was lost. No proof, no payment.
In 1926, however, somebody found a duplicate set of books, and with typical Yankee frugality and maple syrup stick-to-it-iveness, the Vermonters set out to collect. They got their claim before the audit bureau of the comptroller general's office in 1935, and they figured out that the interest had in the meantime piled up by some $57,000 and there were new claims bringing the principal up to $35,000. So the account was frozen there.
But Congressman Charles Albert Plumley of Northfield, Vt., keeps bringing the matter up from time to time. If you know Vermonters, you have an inkling of whether or not the state will collect. And when the federal government considers paying off a debt in these days, that's news.

Helen Hull Founds Opera for Young Americans

By ADELAIDE KERR
AP Feature Service Writer

Helen Huntington Hull—the former Mrs. Vincent Astor—has founded a new opera company in New York because she thinks young American artists need a break.
"These young Americans have been on my mind for years," she told me as we sat in the chintz-upholstered study of her New York apartment the other day. "I feel strongly about their talents. I think America breeds beautiful singing voices—it must be the air. But I don't feel so strongly about the training young artists receive. Some of them are badly taught.
"Even well-trained young artists have difficulty in finding jobs. There aren't enough big opera companies to make room for everybody. So we have founded The New Opera Com-

Examinations tending to diplomas, as authorized by the last legislature, will start in October. A three-man committee is drafting the tests to determine whether the adult applicants measure up to high school standards.

She gives little time to the quiet, distinctive clothes she wears. Her maid shops for everything but her best frocks.
She has other loves besides music. One of them is the country, where she plays tennis and rides horseback. Another is her garden. Her new house at Stansbury, N. Y., is being built in the shape of a half moon so that most of its rooms command a view of the Hudson. A young architect designed it.
"I like to give young people a chance," she said. "They have ideas and respect yours."

pany on a shoestring to give young Americans a chance. The musicians, the chorus and virtually all of the artists will be American.
"We shall present six weeks of opera and ballet at the 44th Street theater in New York, beginning with a gala performance October 14 and ending just before the Metropolitan begins its season late in November. Our repertoire will include such operas as Offenbach's 'La Vie Parisienne', Tschaiikovsky's 'Pique Dame' and Verdi's 'Macbeth'.
Tall, slim, blue-eyed Mrs. Hull has been called by a flock of admirers "the woman who has done most to further the cause of music in New York." For years she has served as chairman of the Auxiliary Board of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Society. In addition to her opera work this fall she expects to launch a series of Monday Morning Musicales, to replace the famous Bagby Musicales and to feature such top-flight artists as Lily Pons, Lotte Lehman and Arthur Spaulding.
She is also president of the Musicians Emergency Fund, founded to help musical artists who are in need. Her work with that organization gave her an insight into the struggles of young American artists and stimulated the founding of the New Opera Company, of which she is also president.
Mrs. Hull is not inclined to talk much about her ambitions for the company. But they are big. She hopes the day will come when the New Opera can support a long season and an opera training school for young artists. Besides that, she hopes it will inspire similar ventures throughout the country. (Remember the summer theater's small beginning and her dream will give you food for thought.)
Recently Mrs. Hull was appointed vice-chairman for New York of the Defense Savings Bonds Committee and she expects to cover the state to stimulate the sale of bonds and stamps.
Now the wife of Lytle Hull, she is one of New York's most active women. She works without fluster. Speaks in a soft, deliberate voice. Slips quietly into her office at the Musicians Emergency Fund. Makes no demands for herself. Didn't even have a mirror in her office until an associate took the initiative.
Mrs. Hull wears her silvershot hair in one of New York's most distinctive coiffures, swooped up in soft curls on her head. The day we talked, they were caught with a dark blue bow, several shades deeper than her blue eyes. Her dark blue frock was fasten-

Vermont May Get Hers
Then there is the matter of paying War of 1812. It looks as though that's going to be cleared up at last, and have to shell out to the Green Mountain State for its expenses in the battle of 1812. The bill is $92,888.90.
It seems that the young republic could borrow money from the states back in those days, and did. Vermont went into the sack for about $11,000 to help finance the war. The government wasn't able to pay off immediately, so the claim stood on the books for quite a spell. Then the Vermont state house burned in 1857, and the record of the loan was lost. No proof, no payment.
In 1926, however, somebody found a duplicate set of books, and with typical Yankee frugality and maple syrup stick-to-it-iveness, the Vermonters set out to collect. They got their claim before the audit bureau of the comptroller general's office in 1935, and they figured out that the interest had in the meantime piled up by some $57,000 and there were new claims bringing the principal up to $35,000. So the account was frozen there.
But Congressman Charles Albert Plumley of Northfield, Vt., keeps bringing the matter up from time to time. If you know Vermonters, you have an inkling of whether or not the state will collect. And when the federal government considers paying off a debt in these days, that's news.
